What Political Movements Are In Nepal

By Siddhi B. Ranjitkar

Movements have been either a fashion or the easiest thing to do in By KTM Metro Reporter in Nepal; so, every political party, students' unions, labor organizations, transport organizations even the business community threaten to launch a movement at the slightest opportunity of cashing in on such a On January 07, 2009, in order to movement. Anybody's movement has been to stop the traffic and shut down the business of other people. If you defy the call of such a movement you risk at getting your vehicle burned down, nobody would Nepali Congress members of the protect you and pay you the compensation for the loss of your vehicle CA have been disrupting since or property not to mention the business you lose.

So, if somebody ran over your pet you could stand on the road and Nepali Congress party, Prime block the traffic demanding the compensation for the loss of the life of your pet. Then, the concerned local administration chief would come to CA and explained the decisions Chairman of the CPN-Maoist and you and talk to you for negotiating with you for the compensation to be made by his government on Prime Minister Prachanda said paid. In case of death of a human in a traffic accident you might ask enforcing that the activities of the YCL the government for declaring the deceased a martyr of the country, agreement the government had (Young Communist League) had and ask for one million rupees for the compensation of the loss of a reached been against the party policy, human life. So, it is not a surprise that Nepal has created thousands of Congress, returning the property, and requested the Head of martyrs thanks to the political parties sending their cadres to kill the revoking the decision made by Organization Department of the cadres of other political parties. The government had paid tens of the Pashupati Area Development CPN-Maoist Mohan Baidya' Kiran' millions of rupees in compensation for the loss of lives in traffic or due Trust (PADT) and accepting the

India IT boss quits over scandal

Source BBC News

The boss of Satyam, India's fourth-biggest software firm, has quit after revealing false accounts including some $1bn (£663m) in fictitious reserves. Chairman Ramalinga Raju apologised and said "the gap in the balance sheet has arisen purely on account of inflated profits" during several years.

He said he was subjecting himself to the laws of the land and would "face the consequences". India's benchmark index fell nearly 7% on the news, as Satyam stock shed 82%. In a letter to the board of directors, Mr Raju said that neither he nor the managing director took any money from the company and did not benefit in financial terms following the "inflated results". He added that no board member had been aware of the situation the firm was in.

'What started as a marginal gap between actual operating profits and the one reflected in the books of accounts continued to grow over the years," said Mr Ramalinga's statement, which was sent to the stock exchange. "It was like riding a tiger, not knowing how to get off without being eaten," he said.

Satyam specialises in business software and benefited from the IT outsourcing boom.

'We have to go beyond this letter and find out what actually has happened," the Securities and Exchange Board of India told reporters. "This is an issue which has very serious implications... It also raises the issue of authenticity of accounts that have been audited and certified by the auditors."

Hitesh Agrawal, head of research with Angel Broking, said: "Indian have been put at stake here, the role of the auditors have also come under serious question". The BBC's Sanjoy Majumder in Delhi says analysts see this as one of the worst crises to have hit corporate India, at a time when the country was hoping to attract foreign investors looking for quick gains in emerging markets.

Our correspondent says many that the international community will now take a harder look at Indian companies and think twice about placing their money there.

The news comes after plans to acquire Maytas Properties and Kathmandu

Out of 52 members of the Parliamentary Party of Madheshi People's Rights Forum (MPRF), a group of 35 members claiming the two-third majority submitted a petition to the Prime Minister for sending back the four ministers such as Foreign Minister Upendra Yadav, Minister for Physical Planning Bijaya Kumar Gacchadar, Education Minister Renu Yadav, and Minister Jaya Prakash Prasad Gupta, as they did not follow the party line.

The young emerging leader of the MPRF in a press conference told the reporters that the four ministers seconded by the MPRF had been deviating from the MPRF party policy line, and speaking against the autonomy of Madhesh, and they were not representing all districts, too. He also said that they decided to remove Gacchadar from the parliamentary leader of the MPRF parliamentary party and the Chief whip of his party Ram Janam Chaudhary from the office, and informed the Chairman of the Constituent Assembly about it. However, another member of the MPRF parliamentary party Sharad Singh Bhandari said that their decision was not valid.

On January 07, 2009, the Parliamentary Party meeting of MPRF held in its office in Kathmandu after the heated discussion on these matters decided to suspended decisions made by the group of the 35 dissident members of the Parliamentary Party.

Those words, from of Representatives Nancy Pelosi, George W Bush - that in the eight years of his presidency he actively pursued policies deregulation which caused the meltdown since the Great Depression. It is a grim legacy for President Bush to contemplate as he enters his final days in office but is it true?

He certainly presided over a widespread failure of regulation. On his watch, the US authorities did little to prevent the sale of millions of mortgages to people who could never afford them. They failed to police the market in mortgage-backed securities which has now collapsed with such devastating consequences.

Reciting Swosthani Story

By Siddhi B. Ranjitkar

Every Nepalese household believing in Lord Swosthani recites the story of Swosthani every year during the month called Magha. This year reciting of Swosthani story starts on January 10, 2009, and then ends on the next full moon day. After the evening meal all family members and some neighbors who have no Swosthani readers gather together and sit for listening the story every night for the whole month.

Traditionally, anybody could read out the story, and a reader does not need to perform purification rituals; so, anybody willing to recite the story might sit and take the meticulously hand-written rectangular (3-5" x 9-10") unbound book usually wrapped in a piece of red cloth and revered as a God Swosthani in Nepal Bhasa and read it out. Currently, printed books are available in the Kathmandu market in Nepal Bhasa and Nepali language, too.

The reader performs a simple ritual of worship to the holy book and lights an incense stick to it before reading it. A small wicker basketful full of tidbits is placed nearby the Holy Scripture at the time of reading it out. After reading a few sheets of the book for a night, the reader distributes the tidbits to all listeners as the blessing from the god.

The Swosthani story is about the creation of earth and the life on it. Then, it tells about mainly Lord Shiva, his two spouses, and two sons. His first tricky marriage with Satidevi ends up in tragedy, as Dacche Prajapati: father of Satidevi could never accept the unequal marriage. After the untimely death of Satidevi, Lord Shiva almost goes insane and carries the corpse on his back being unable to accept the reality of death of Satidevi. As the organs of the dead body of Satidevi falls one by one, each organ fallen at each place becomes a deity and takes the names of the organ.

Satidevi in her next incarnation becomes the daughter of King Himalaya, and gets the name of Parbati. When she reaches puberty, her parents think to give her in marriage to Lord Vishnu but she dedicates her life to Lord Shiva and ultimately gets wedded to Lord Shiva.

The divine couple of Lord Shiva and Parbati have two sons called Ganesh and Kumar.

Ganesh becomes an elephant-headed. After a long time out of his abode called Kailash, Lord Shiva comes back and finds Ganesh at the entrance guarding her mother Parbati to take a long bath in her inner sanctum, and refuses let him in not recognizing Lord Shiva. Fiery Lord Shiva in his anger cut off the head of Ganesh and enters his abode. Parbati finding Lord Shiva unexpectedly showing up in her inner sanctum feels something must have gone wrong to Ganesh. Lord Shiva realizes his mistake and asks his attendants to go immediately to the east and cut off the head of any living being they meet first on the way and bring it home. They bring a head of an elephant. Lord Shiva fixes it on the shoulder of Ganesh and revives him.

Lord Ganesh receives the boon of the privilege of having the first the offering among the Hindu deities. When both Ganesh and Kumar come Siddhi@SiddhiRanjitkar.com for Democratic Speaker of the House of age, the parents want to bestow a boon on one of them that completes a round trip to Mount Sumeru first. Kumar having a peacock sum up the charge against as his vehicle immediately flies on it to Mount Sumeru but Ganesh having a mouse for his vehicle remains helpless and gets upset. His steed mouse finding its master so upset repeatedly asks Ganesh the reason for being so upset. Ganesh tells the reason. Then the mouse counsels Ganesh how to please his parents. Following the counsel of biggest financial and economic the mouse Ganesh goes to his parents and asks them to stand together and then makes three circles around them saying, "you are the parents and the mount Sumeru for me." Then, Lord Shiva and Parbati together bestow on Ganesh the privilege of receiving the first offering among the deities. So, none of the Hindu deities accepts the offerings made to him/her without first offering to Lord Ganesh.

> After the story of the divine couple, the story of the mundane folks starts.

> A childless couple gets a girl child. A childless couple serves a holy man for years and pleases him. Then, the holy man gives them a lump of fresh cow dung and asks them to keep it under the cover of a brass bowel for twenty-one days and then see it on the twenty-second day. The couple follows the instructions and finds a girl child and names her a 'Go-maiju' means born of cow dung.

Maytas Infra failed. "The aborted Maytas acquisition deal was the last attempt to fill the fictitious assets with real ones," said the letter. Mr Raju said a task force investigating the failed deal had been set up. He recommended to the board that Merrill Lynch be entrusted with the talk of "quickly exploring" merger opportunities.

BBC correspondent Karishma Vaswani in Mumbai says the consequences for corporate India are extremely dire, given that Satyam is not just listed on Indian stock markets, but was also the first Indian technology firm to list on the hi-tech US Nasdaq market.

Satyam said its managing director and co-founder B Rama Raju, Raju's brother, had also resigned. The company did not give any reason for resignation. Just three months ago, Satyam received an award from a group of Indian directors for excellence in corporate governance.

Hard drive destruction 'crucial'

Source BBC News

The only way to stop fraudsters stealing information from old computer hard drives is by destroying them completely, a found. study Which? has Computing magazine recovered 22,000 "deleted" files from eight computers purchased on eBay.

Freely available software can be used to recover files that users think they have permanently Which? deleted. While recommends smashing hard drives with a hammer, experts say for most consumers that's a step too far.

Criminals source old computers from internet auction sites or in rubbish tips, to find users' valuable details, and a number of recent cases have shown the dangers in disposing of secondhand equipment.

A number of software solutions exist to more definitively erase files and information. The most straightforward solution, according to Which?, is complete destruction - and it recommends using a hammer. It must be done with caution because those smithereens contain environmentally harmful materials so they should be recycled - for instance at the vendor from whom a new hard drive is purchased.

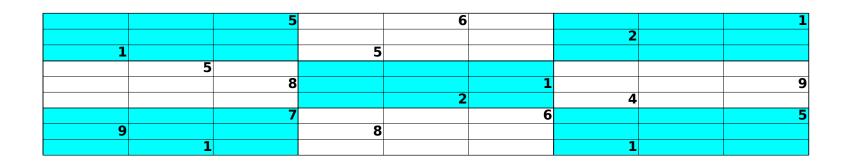

However experts advise that even a treatment with a hammer may not be the end of your data. Expensive and sophisticated techniques could be used to recover deleted data, even from a hard drive platter that has been physically damaged. But for most people, the freely available deleting software or a simple hard drive formatting procedure should make the data sufficiently difficult to retrieve as to not be worth a criminal's time.
